

I have been a practicing sociologist for nearly a decade conducting program evaluations, feasibility studies, marketing and other sociological research in the public and private sectors, developing and conducting trainings and workshops for business and community organizations, providing community development, cross-cultural, and aging populations consulting, developing instruments and other assessment tools for community and public use, and conducting personal research of an applied nature. I have also been teaching academic sociology part-time since 1995.

Applied sociology may be more relevant today than ever before as the challenges facing individuals and societies in the domestic and world communities continue to expand and deepen by the day. I am committed to furthering the mission of AACCS to broaden the reach of applied sociology to more productively effect positive social change and I would be honored to be elected to serve on the Board of Directors.
